Awards $42,700 to Non-Profit Organizations Statewide

12-19-01

The Utah Arts Council Board of Directors has awarded $42,700 in Community Arts Development and Technical Assistance grants to Utah non-profit organizations.

With a mission to "advance the arts in all their phases," the Utah Arts Council Grants Program supports the arts projects of Utah's nonprofit organizations with a goal of enriching the lives of residents and their communities.

This year's recipients range from the Lincoln Center Youth Symphony in Brigham City, to Nizhoni Bridges, Inc in Butte.

As always, these funds are matched by the recipient dollar-for-dollar, with cash from ticket sale, donations, local government grants, and other sources.

Community Arts Development Grants are awarded each December to first-time applicants and newly incorporated non-profit organizations. The grants are limited to no more than $3,000 and are a combination of state and federal funds.

Technical Assistance Grants are available annually for up to $1,000 to advance artistic development, technical capabilities or management skills of arts organizations.

Challenge Grants for Arts Councils are also available annually and are designed to encourage local arts councils to develop alternative funds from local governments' school districts, businesses, etc.

Challenge Grants are limited to $2,000 and are the only Utah Arts Council grants which can be used for capital expenditures. These grants are matched two-to-one, and the match money must be in hand at the time of application.

All applications submitted to the Utah Arts Council are reviewed by a volunteer panel of arts administrators, artists, arts patrons who make recommendations for funding to the Utah Arts Council of Directors, which then makes the funding decisions.

One hundred ninety-six Utah organizations are recipients of the $1,374 grants awarded this fiscal year (FY01). Director Bonnie Stephens says, "Thousands touch the lives of every Utahns. The impact of the arts is critical to social and economic development in Utah."

For more information about recipients, the Grants Program and application lines, contact Grants and Endowment Manager Sherry Waddingham at the Utah Arts Council at 801-236-7550 or check the UAC website at www.arts.utah.gov.

Through this web site, youth from across the country can post pictures, poems, letters, and words of encouragement for our servicemen and women around the world. Military personnel can then visit the site to view notes from across the country.

Heber Valley Arts Council Holds Social

9-19-01

A perfect autumn day beckoned as the Heber Valley Arts Council kicked off its eventful 2001-2002 season Saturday, at the Soldier Hollow Day Lodge.

Among the colorful hills and pines with a birds-eye view of the valley, the entire community was invited to meet with artists, entertainers, and writers and get a preview of coming attractions to be sponsored by the council.

Community leaders and citizenry took advantage of this opportunity to meet and greet the cultural arm of Heber Valley, and see first-hand the progress of the Biathlon venue.

Pages from the council's new coffee table book of original poetry, prose, and photography, Heber Valley, the People and the Land, were spread out on tables for a promotion and advance showing.

The Heber Valley Arts Council's season calendar was also available to the public, with an exciting array of events including the Mountain High Chamber Ensemble concert, Polar Express Opening Night, the Cantabile Chorale, Christmas Eve Organ Recital, Piano Festival, and Dance Festival.

Bob Donahue, who came to Heber Valley after 35 years in Manhattan, is the President of the Arts Council as well as facilitator.

"This social is to say 'thank you' to the community and members for all the work they have done," said Donahue. "We hope to continue the social on a yearly basis."

He added that they are adding literary arts to the visual arts, as evidenced by their new book. A grant from SLOC's Cultural Olympia funded the project. He added that all donations to their organization are tax deductible.

Donahue was enthusiastic about the amount and quality of talent in Heber Valley.

"Some of the finest talent to be found is right here in the valley," he stated, "if only we could capture it all."

On hand to entertain was a songstress group, One Voice.

Harmonizing were Carolyn McDonald, Deon Stott, and Gail Witkamp. Mary Pitts, who completes the quartet, was not with them.

Other performers included the Round Valley Riders, with Mark Allen, Steve Smith, Doug Pope and Ken and Mignon Probst. Musical string music featured Vickie Winterton and Dennis Harrington.

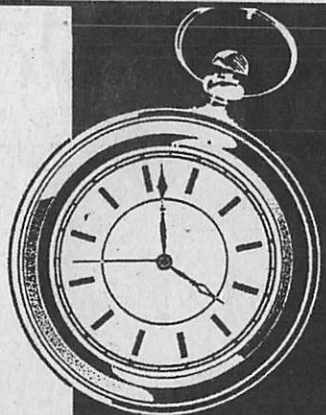

The social provided a buffet table, which was enjoyed by many members and visitors. Writers, photographers and artists featured in the book were present throughout the afternoon.

Utah State News: Mrs. Mary Jane Thompson Taylor, a pioneer of 1847, died in Salt Lake last week. Her father, Robert H. Thompson, was the first private secretary of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

Bicycle thieves have been making the lives of Lehi wheelmen a burden recently, two wheels having been purloined one night last week, one being discovered hidden in grass outside of town the following morning.

One hundred and thirty cases of beer were publicly destroyed Wednesday at Topeka, Kans., through smashing by orders of the board of health. The liquor has been secured from the joints on official raids, and was stored in the city prison. The saloon owners were about to secure possession by court proceedings, when the chief of police declared it a menace to the health of that portion of the city, and destroyed the beer.

Local Waves: Our old time friend, Heber Taylor, after two or three years wandering, is back at Heber again but for how long we cannot say.

The streets are not badly in need of sprinkling today, and from present indications will not for some time to come. According to reports the rain has been almost universal all over the state, and we had a fair sprinkling of it here yesterday.

(Gypsy Cont.) GYPSY, written by Arthur Laurents with music by Cole Porter and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, is one of Broadway's most famous and enduring musicals. The story takes place during the brilliant years of Vaudeville and centers around Rose, the greatest of all stage mothers, and her two daughters, June and Louise. Rose wants nothing less than for her daughters to become bright Broadway stars, despite whatever hardships they must endure through the Great Depression and often against June's and Louise's own wishes.

With the kind help of Herbie, their manager, they troop around the country as "Baby June and

Her Newsboys" and later as June grows up, as "Dainty June and Her Farmboys."

With such memorable Broadway show-stoppers such as: "Let Me Entertain You," "Everything's Coming Up Roses," "All I Need Is The Girl," and "You Gotta Get A Gimmick," GYPSY is quintessential family entertainment. A great balance of drama and comedy make GYPSY a musical with a message.

Ultimately June runs away to make her own life as Vaudeville gives way to Burlesque, Louise chooses to become something completely different and of her own creation—a ladylike stripper—who never truly reveals anything.

Financing For Larger More

Financing larger, more expensive homes has recently as conforming loan limits. Homes priced in this range of $150,000 to $200,000 points lower than jumbo loans. Borrowers can save hundreds of thousands of dollars on their loan.

The belief that "more" is better seems to be catching on with American homebuyers. In 1994, conforming loans accounted for nearly 25 percent of the total loan dollar volume, up from 20 percent in 1994, according to data from the Federal Home Mortgage Disclosure Act. Jumbo loans are mortgages that
